Elective Course in French 1F: Classicism	ClasF3	2	1	1	-	-

Course description (Syllabus): French literary criticism designates, by the term "classicism", the seventeenth century's French literary facts, based on certain original mutations, which differentiates the evolution of French literature from all other European literary movements until that time, at that time and from that time on. Literary and artistic France expresses itself by the search for perfection and measure, for balance and harmony. Reason and analytical spirit manifest themselves in all fields of art: classical art is a synthesis. All this will be proven during this course, through the works of the colossal authors we will be studying: Corneille, Racine and Molière.

Course description (Syllabus): The elective course aims at strengthening knowledge related to the evolution of the western novel exploring authors who contributed fundamentally to the understanding of personal identity and the modern society. Due to the diverse and multifarious character of the Romanian experience, as well as its degree of spreading, the course will focus on the coherence of various cultural areas, including not only predecessors from peripheric areas or those who bring forward the end of the XIXth century, but also the development of the European Romanian model in the North-American area. The enhancement of the perspective, beyond stable temporal and geographic boundaries boosts receptivity to each contribution to the building of the European Romanian canon and at the same time the development of some mutual features characteristic to the paradygm of the modern novel. Thus, the course will review authors belonging to the following areas: Russian (Gogol, Tolstoi), Anglo-American (Durrell, Huxley, Steinbeck, Fitzgerald), Italian (Manzoni, Svevo, Buzzati, Pavese), German (Döblin, Hesse, Thomas Mann), French (Gide, Malraux, Celine) and Central-European (Hasek, Schulz, Zweig, Koestler).

Elective Course in Romanian 1R: Common Vocabulary, Specialized Vocabulary	LCLS3	2	1	1	-	-

Course description (Syllabus): The Romanian language is dynamic and open to changes, which implies, among others, a great mobility of the vocabulary. The entrance of new words, the development of new meanings and the "migration" of some words from the specialized vocabulary to the common vocabulary causes the obedience of the speakers (taught in different stages) to complex lexical “pressure”. During this lecture we will deal with the problem of specializing the meaning of the words based on authentic texts from the written and spoken media, this being the proof of the balance between the process of professional specialization of words and their tendency to stay intelligible. Also, we will be dealing with the teaching of specialized language to non-native speakers of Romanian, based on manuals, the presumption being that the definitions must be accessible. Finally, we will take into account the dictionaries of recent words published in the last 25 years to capture the dynamic of the vocabulary.

Comparative Literature IV	LC4	4	2	2	-	-

Course description (Syllabus): This course focuses on the idea of the abrupt changes modernity brings with it. It concerns the transformation of the world vision, the representation of reality, the place of the individual in the modern world and the crisis of the language. Poetry is seen as the most important tool in redefining the self in modernity. The modern paradigm is built on the theoretical consideration of the poets from the beginning of modernity: Baudelaire, Rimbaud, and Mallarmé.

Elective Course in Romanian O4R: Ethical Renewal in Recent Romanian Prose	REPRR5	2	1	1	-	-

Course description (Syllabus): The prose of the eighties has become outstanding not only through the attempt at innovating the narrative techniques and strategies, through its experimental dimension, but also through tackling some areas of reality previously ignored in prose, such as daily human existence, the immediate present and social marginality, thus searching distance from "the novel of the obsessive decade" and its "major themes", saturated with a conventional and often duplicitous moral vision. This course attempts at reconstructing the main elements of this picture, discovering the diversity of the perspectives belonging to authors such as Mircea Nedelciu, Gheorghe Crăciun, Petru Cimpoieșu, Cristian Teodorescu, Sorin Stoica, Filip Florian, O. Nimigean.

Elective Course in French 3F: Cognitive Semantics	SemCF5	2	1	1	-	-

Course description (Syllabus): Cognitive linguistics starts from the postulate that language is an integral part of human cognition, in other words language is considered as a product of the cognitive processes. Thus, cognitive semantics deals with the functioning of human spirit in relation to psychology. The best known branch of this discipline is known as "prototype semantics", where the prototype is the best specimen of a category.

The course aims not only to familiarize students with the fundamentals of cognitive semantics, such as prototype, categorization, hierarchical organization of categories, and their connection with the meanings of words, etc., but also to enrich vocabulary, by determining the various hierarchical relations between words (hyperonymy, hyponymy).

Elective Course in Romanian 7R: Language and Communication	LCR6	2	1	1	-	-

Course description (Syllabus): Human communication comes in different forms. Within this course we study the way in which people use language for specific purposes, share information or persuade with words. The overall purpose is to comprehend the actual use of language, and the way language interacts with the human emotional and motivational architecture. Since the use of language is always social bound and driven by personal, organizational, institutional and cultural agenda, we examine the manner in which the social context impacts the use of languages, and the other way round, as well as the means by which people coming from different cultural backgrounds communicate with each other.
